Jim Hudak bio

Jim Hudak, whose last name means “the musician” in Slovakian, was born into a family with a 500-year history of music and composition. In his own multi-decade career he has gained deep insight into the intricacies of the music industry, not only as a musician, but also as a music rights licensing executive for ASCAP and SESAC. These performing rights organizations represent the full spectrum, from world-class superstars to the up and coming artists of tomorrow. Jim also has years of experience in the retail sector of the music business.

However, what Jim Hudak is best known for, and rightfully so, is his work as a solo pianist - although he is also a highly trained vocalist, guitarist, and composer who has studied with acclaimed teachers throughout the US. Additionally, he has a college degree in Recording Arts and owns his own professional studio. Jim has been a performer since the age of 10 and still does approximately 200 gigs a year. In his time he has written literally hundreds of original compositions, with one of them being currently submitted to Bette Midler for consideration on an upcoming album. He is also a skilled arranger who has worked on arrangements of thousands of songs in his enduring career.

As a recording artist, Jim has released six CD's of piano based instrumental music on his Brainstorm Records label. His recent album “Bridging Textures” was produced by Grammy-winning Windham Hill Records founder Will Ackerman and includes a number of Will's top-flight studio musicians such as bassist Michael Manring, among others. Jim's music has a highly accessible sound that includes elements of classical, pop, jazz, and country. In addition to his music being sold and downloaded worldwide, its popularity on the Sirius, XM, and DMX satellite music networks is a testament to his creative talent. Jim Hudak is a consummate music industry professional with a long history in the business that only continues to evolve and gather momentum over time.
